

Online Product Feature Comparison Database

Purpose

Demartek provides detailed technical feature and market information about computer products, with an emphasis on business software applications for small, medium and large enterprises.

The Online Product Feature Comparison Database is a flexible database of product information that allows users to select from among products and feature criteria that they regard as important in a decision-making process.

The database consists of comparison sets that are groups of similar, competitive products in a particular area. Users can select any or all of the products in a particular comparison set, and then choose any or all of the feature criteria for that comparison set. The results are a table, or matrix, of all the selected products and feature criteria. The comparison can be run as often as needed or with as many different combinations of products and feature criteria as desired.

This database is updated on a regular basis including the addition of information regarding newer versions of products in each comparison set as new versions of those products are released. Users can select any combination of different versions of the same product or different products.

The database is accessible with any reasonably current web browser and uses standard web browser functions to display its results. This database is available at www.demartek.com.
